32 HOURS 7 MINUTES

A TRUE STORY AN OUTLAW RACE... AN AMERICAN LEGEND.

October 15, 1983. The sun is setting, the gas is topped and it's time for one last run in the most outrageous road race in American history. Formerly the Cannonball Run, the US Express gathers the best of the best, to speed nonstop from New York to Los Angeles, in a race where the only rule is there are no rules. These real-life, 32-hour outlaws drive over the limit and under the radar with one thing in their sights: becoming the fastest humans to ever cross the continent. Irreverent and gripping, this feature documentary chronicles the last great American outlaw race.

Now with over two decades of hindsight, the Express racers reflect back on their illegal quest and raise some interesting questions: Are there gray areas in a no rules event? What are you risking when you'll stop at nothing to win? In addition to interviews with the Express participants, the film also features commentary from professional drivers such as Bobby Unser and Bobby Rahal. 32 Hours 7 Minutes will take you back to 1983, send you speeding across the continent at over 150mph and reveal why some laws just had to be broken so that one record could be set.

"We were just out minding our own business, going as fast as we could."
